Dumplings with Royal Baking Powder

No dessert is more delicious, wholesome and appetizing than a well-made dumpling, filled with the fruit of the season. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the crust is always rendered light, flaky, tender and digestible. Dumplings made with it, baked or boiled, will be dainty and wholesome, and may be eaten steaming hot with perfect impunity.

RECIPE:—One quart of flour, thoroughly sifted with three teaspoons of Royal Baking Powder and a small amount of salt; rub in a piece of butter or lard the size of an egg, and then add one large potato, grated in the flour, after the butter is well mixed, stir in milk and the consistency of soft biscuit dough; break off pieces of dough large enough to cover four quarters of an apple (or other fruit as desired) without rolling, and lay in an earthen dish (or steamer) and steam until the fruit is tender. Bake if preferred.

In all receipts calling for cream of tartar and soda, substitute Royal Baking Powder. Less trouble, never fails, makes more appetizing and wholesome food and is more economical. Royal Baking Powder is specially made for use in the preparation of the finest and most delicate cookery.

SIERRA VALLEY.

Farm Products—Free From Tramps.

The Sierra Valley Leader says: Pork is worth ten cents per pound here this week, by the quarter or carcass.

Much butter, beef, pork and grain have been brought into town this week.

The hay market is looking up a little. There has been several buyers looking for stock hay this week from the north end of the valley.

Sol Rousseau sold one hundred tons of hay to G. Humphrey last week for $6 per ton, and feeds it to Mr. Humphrey's cattle.

Sierra Valley potatoes cannot be bought for less than two cents per pound, and our merchants can import them for much less money.

This valley is free from the tramp nuisance until next spring. We are too far from the railroad and too apt to have big snowstorms, which are not wholesome to tramps.

The Downville Messenger says about eighteen inches of rain fell at Downville last month. Only two and a half inches fell here. It has been seven or eight years since eighteen inches fell here in one year.

G. E. Arnold, book-keeper at the Louis saw-mill, was here last Sunday. He informs us that twelve or fourteen men are working around the mill. A dam is being built in which to float the logs prior to their being taken into the mill to be cut into lumber.

An Unprecedented Storm.

The worst snowstorm that has ever visited New Mexico has been raging for eight days. Many cowboys and sheep-herders have been frozen to death and the losses to sheep and cattle are very large. Passenger trains were snowbound and the occupants suffered for food.

Stolen Child.

The six-year-old child of W. G. Dickinson of Commonwealth, Wis., was stolen eight years ago by a man named Minner and is believed to have turned up in Los Angeles, after many hardships and wanderings.

Indignant Chinamen.

Leading Chinese merchants at Marysville, who were named as references by some of the new Chinese women arrivals, express indignation over the matter and threaten trouble if the latter should swear to the alleged claim that they are the wives of the merchants.

A Damaged War Ship.

The British man-of-war Amphion, with the Governor-General and party on board, in a dense fog struck a rock about twenty-five miles from Victoria Wednesday and narrowly escaped sinking. The vessel returned and went on the dry dock.

Don't Know Their Enemy.

It is not known by whom the attack was made on soldiers near Crittenden, A. T., on the 4th inst. Some think it was by snugglers and others by Mexicans, in the dark, believed the soldiers were Indians.

Not Permitted to Destroy Sutter's Fort.

The Board of Trustees of Sacramento county are not permitted to burn Sutter's Fort, or to destroy the historic structure, by the deed of John A. Sutter.

Object to Bostonians.

The directors of the Southern California Railroad are mostly local men whose money has gone into the enterprise, and they resent having foisted upon them a set of officials selected by bankers in Boston.

Rich Discovery.

A fabulously rich silver vein was discovered last Thursday in San Gabriel Canyon, Cal. Assays of the ore specimens show $12,000 per ton. The place is located about five miles back of the Azusa.

Bodily Injured.

The British man-of-war Amphion has been docked at Esquimalt, and she shows a jagged hole in the hull thirty feet long, the result of striking a hidden rock in the fog Wednesday.

Corn for Fuel.

The Beatrice, Neb., Express says that the low price of corn in that vicinity has induced a number of persons to contract for a considerable quantity of it for fuel purposes.

The Fruit of Violation.

In no case is the folly of violence in medication more conspicuously shown by its fruit than in the effect upon the intestines of excessive purgation. The stomach and bowels are first painfully gripped, then the latter are copiously, suddenly and repeatedly evacuated. This is far beyond the necessities of the case, most unnatural, excessively debilitating. The organs are incapacitated from resuming their function with normal moderation. Astringent is resorted to which reduces them to their former condition of laxity. To this monstrous and harmful condition, Hostetter's stomach bitters is the happy alternative. It relaxes gently, naturally, sufficiently, it diverts bile from the blood into its proper channel, it invigorates healthy digestion and complete assimilation. It is a complete defense against malaria, and conquers rheumatism, neuritis, nervousness, kidney and bladder trouble.

A FAMILY DROWNED.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The National Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union resumed its session this morning. A telegram from Washington was read, to the effect that a straight barroom license has been issued to Vice President Morton's hotel, in the name of James K. Jernan, the manager, and that all other saloons were without a license.

Mrs. Ellen Foster of Iowa, the anti-Willard leader, arose and said: "I would suggest that it does not comport with the objects of the W. C. T. U. to make any suggestions to Vice-President Morton. It was probably necessary for him to have a bar in his hotel, just as it is necessary for the Palmer House to have a bar; just as it is necessary for the W. C. T. U. to have its headquarters in the Palmer House, notwithstanding its bar."

"I think I will ask the Committee on Resolutions to prepare a resolution to express the sentiment of this Convention regarding the saloon license taken out by our Vice-President," said Miss Willard. "We have information from Washington from the best of sources that he has taken out a license, and now we can express our opinions."

A motion was made to refer the matter to the Committee on Resolutions, which was carried almost unanimously.

The forenoon session was devoted to the reports of the National Organizers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The text of the proposed agreement for the big railroad trust to take the place of the Interstate Railway Association is published here. The plan is to put the management of the western roads into the hands of a corporation which has been incorporated in New Jersey, under the name of the People's Transportation Company, the roads taking its stock. Its board of directors are to be made up of one officer from each road, three representatives of the New York Banks' Executive Committee, three railroad men and two bankers; they to control the passenger and freight traffic. Each road is to be allowed operating expenses and the remainder will be turned over to the trust, which is to last ten years.

The Cronin Trial.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—In the Cronin case to-day Archibald Cameron, a saloon keeper, testified that he heard Caughlin introduce Kunze to another man as his friend. The rest of the session was occupied with technical points concerning the specimens of blood and hair from the Carlson cottage and the trunk. Professor Talman, a microscopist, testified that he found microscopical hairs, such as only exist on the human body, in a drop of blood examined. That blood and hair appeared to be of a human source.

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S comments on the results of Tuesday's elections are amusing. He claims that at last the leaven of tariff reform has leavened the whole lump; that the West, which has "suffered most from the unjust burden of tariff taxation," has awakened. If Mr. Cleveland is not joking, his caveat in the influence of his own policy swamps his judgment. He takes no account of the fact that Prohibition split the Republican party in Iowa, and that third-termism, personal considerations and Sunday law complications cost Foraker his election in Ohio. In the matter of New York the ex-President is silent. He hates to admit that Hill and the saloons accomplished what Cleveland and Tariff Reform failed to do last year. The Bulletin says: His comment that Virginia remains true to the Democracy of Jefferson and Jackson would make those worthies turn in their graves had they known the issue on which the fight was made there and the methods by which it was won. Mississippi Mr. Cleveland judiciously ignored. The less said about that the better for the credit of Democracy in the South. Curiously enough he is also silent in the only case in which his Free-trade fetish has exercised any influence on the result. In Massachusetts some manufacturers in certain lines think they could better compete with the South and West if they had free raw material, and their disaffection somewhat cut down the Republican majority. Perhaps Mr. Cleveland skipped Massachusetts knowing that his party has no real chance, and that it would be a waste of his ammunition for the next campaign to pay any attention to that sturdy commonwealth. He is open to proposals for 1892, and evidently wants to curry favor where it may do the most good. He needs all the encouragement he can get to keep up his spirits, and if he can find any in Tuesday's results no one will grudge him the privilege of hugging his delusion.

MONTANA is now a State in the Union and represented by a bright star in the blue field of the flag. Montana is pregnant with possibilities, excellently by none of the other new States. She stands at the head of the precious metal producing States. Her output last year exceeded $32,000,000 as against $26,000,000 for Colorado, $12,000,000 for California and $12,000,000 for Nevada. Despite this enormous output, the great new commonwealth of the North has scarcely been prospected. It is rich in coal, and the baser metals are as plentiful as the precious. It has immense agricultural possibilities, the soil being fertile and water abundant. Her mountains and valleys, says the San Francisco Post, are covered with dense forests, and her natural water power is beyond computation in value. In agriculture and manufacturing industries Montana rivals Pennsylvania in her possibilities, and has her gold, silver, copper and lead besides. The climate is better than that of the Keystone State the year round, though some cold waves are encountered occasionally in the winter months. It is safe to predict that Montana will grow in population and develop in manufacturing more rapidly than any other of the four new States. She has great natural advantages and a pushing, forceful people, who have framed for themselves and adopted a most enlightened Constitution upon which they will build wise and progressive laws. Hail to Montana!

In the Italian army the system of siesta prevails, under which all troops in the field lie down to sleep for a couple of hours during the heat of the day. The practice is so universally accepted that the hour is fixed in general orders.

A Marriage Dodge: An exchange warns Justices of the Peace, and ministers generally to beware of a couple who are doing the country. They get married and then present a fraudulent $20 check, telling the officiating clergyman or Justice to retain $10 as his fee. The happy couple make $10 by the transaction, and immediately disappear, not waiting for congratulations of friends and wedding presents.

OLD-FASHIONED SIGNS.

Old Announcements to Be Seen in English Towns and Villages.

Among the oddities of tavern signs in England those that contain the names of the apostles are not uncommon, says the Detroit Free Press. There are several "Luke's" taverns—the district or ward probably bearing the saintly name. Once the writer came across "Peter's Finger," the sign-board bearing a figure with pointed finger, evidently representing the saint in discoursing.

In a line of quaint instances, however, may be named the following: "Honest Lawyer" and "Silent Woman," who are humorously depicted as having attained that state of perfection or discretion when the head is cut off and carried under the arm. "Fig and Whistle," "Cock and Bottle" and "Lamb and Pig" are somewhat strange combinations, but "Horse and Groom," "Fox and Lamb," "Coach and Horses," and such like, call for less comment. In London the "Hole in the Wall" probably contains an aperture through which supper beer is served to customers who come by a side entrance. I remember one hotel which in exterior rhyme gave "good advice," though scarcely appropriate, and may be deemed savoring of cant, commencing:

"Let moderation be your guide,
While another country inn, called 'The Wheel,' has this bidding:

"Stop, friend, stop, I make no doubt,
You'll help me turn the wheel about."
There was a tavern in London where if one entered and deposited a farthing on the counter without speaking, a glass of ale would be served, but whether more than once a day, or the origin of the singular custom, I did not learn.

Some hostilities claim in the name of the evening however such a distinction as "Brown's Entire," meaning, I believe, that its liquors are exclusively supplied by him. In the Isle of Man was to be seen the following effusion on an inn on a hillside:

"My name is Abraham Low,
I'm half way up the hill;
I'll be up the top of the hill,
That w'll be better still;
Then come and take a will,
Take whatever you will,
The price I be me are low."

In addition to being a tribute of affection, the wife of a certain "Landlord of the Lion" did a little advertising for herself (like the widow of the sculptor who added a sort of postscript to her perpetuation of his memory, viz: "Monuments of this kind, $250"), as follows:

"Be it a stone, in hopes of Zion,
Doth lie the Landlord of the Lion,
(His wife keeps on the business still),
Resigned to the Heavenly Will."

There are other businesses or "professions" that have been announced in an odd way. Over the door of an aspiring chimney sweep in Manchester I once read:

"Joseph Doe, fire extinguisher, he lives here,
Seeks for orders far and near;
With his brush, scraper and machine
He sweeps chimneys very clean."

A PRINCIPAL HOST.

The Disinterested Hospitality of Duke Ludwig of Bavaria.

One of the most lovely of Alpine health resorts is Bad Kreuth, a hamlet of some half-dozen houses built by the side of a spring of mineral water. The charm of the resort is not, however, due to its loveliness, nor to its healing waters, but to the fact that its landlord is Prince Ludwig of Bavaria, a courteous host, who in his management of the place combines a lucrative business with a most generous charity.

The Prince, the elder son of Duke Maximilian and the brother of the Empress Austria, surrendered to his younger brother, Karl Theodor, all his rights as the head of the family, because he wished marry a lady of inferior social position, with whom he had fallen in love.

The marriage proved to be a happy one, and to this day, though more than thirty years have passed since they were united, the Prince's manner to his wife is more that of a lover than of a middle-aged married man. They have no children, and live for the greater part of the year in a simple suite of apartments at Bad Kreuth, where, according to a writer in the Cornhill Magazine, she diffuses brightness and happiness around her, and he shows how a Prince may earn an honest livelihood, and be the first, not to receive, but to render aid.

The whole of the health-resort belongs to the ducal family. The servants are theirs, and the entire management of the place is under Prince Ludwig's superintendence. He is his own butcher, brewer, dairyman and baker.

During June, July and August, Kreuth is filled with Southern Germans who pay liberally for their rooms and board, and during these months the Prince's harvest-time. During May and September the Prince receives no paying guests, but fills the house with those he calls his "friends." They are those who are too proud to ask for charity, but need a little help—officers depending upon their pay, university students, poor professors, struggling literary men and artists.

Two or three hundred of these "friends" are housed, fed and tended at the hotel, during May and September, as carefully as the wealthiest guests, and that, too, without its costing them one penny. If at the height of the paying season a room is left vacant, some poor invalid is invited to occupy it, and no one can tell from the manner of the host or his servants that the new arrival is not a millionaire.

Prince Ludwig never forgets a face or a name, and has a pleasant word for every one, whether a paying guest or a "friend." His manner is the same to all, the sympathetic greeting of a courteous host and the kindly greeting of a well-bred man.

A few days ago a newspaper announced the death of two men—neighbors and friends—in Windham Center, Mass. Their homes were on the same street, opposite each other. Without previous illness, both died suddenly on the same day. A physician, while attending one, was summoned to the other. Post-mortem examinations revealed the fact that one died of rupture of the right auricle of the heart and the other of rupture of the left ventricle of the heart.

THE PINES.

Far back in days of childhood stood a grove of stately pines. The fields spread green around them and their shadowy outlines Reached up into the sky so far that I believed it true That angels, on their stretched arms, passed thro' the heavenly blue.

And when the night winds murmured in their branches sweet and low, I listened thro' the dark and said: "Yes, angels' harps I know: Good angels, who will give me all I want if I am kind."

For childhood's eyes look far and wide, but childhood's heart is blind.

And as the angel music filled my soul with visions bright, I lay upon my pillow in a dream of rapt delight, Where noble knights and maidens moved in an enchanted land.

"Sweet angels, grant me two gifts, and I'll be good, I pray: A palace for my home, and let my mother live with me; My mother dear, so beautiful, that like to you she seems, Oh, let her live forever!" thus I whispered in my dreams.

No palaces are mine, yet round me woods and mountains stand, Armed in all the splendor of the wondrous fairy-land. And o'er the grave beneath the pines the birds sing all the day, and Faith's bright angel tells me that my mother lives away.

PARDON'S GOOD LUCK.

How She Proposed For and Secured a Partner.

Philosophers say that there is no such thing as luck. Asa Darwin thought differently.

"My luck, exactly," said he, despairing.

"I might have known just how it would be."

He sat on the old stone porch, staring out toward the sunset, his chair tipped back on its two hind legs, his hands thrust aimlessly into his trousers pockets.

It was cold enough to justify the fire of beech logs that was blazing on the hearth in the room inside, where Pardon was tucked up under the red morning curtains that she had just sponged and mended neatly, but it was not an easy thing for Mr. Darwin to relinquish the habit of out-door lounging that had clung to him all the summer through.

"What is it, father?" said Pardon, coming briskly to the door with a tack hammer in one hand and a paper of tacks in the other.

"Jones has just gone by," said Mr. Darwin. "He says the old cow has got out on the railroad track again."

Pardon bit her lip and said, "I told you she would, father," said she, "if you didn't have those bars repaired."

"And she's got run over," dolefully added Darwin. "I'm sure I don't know what we're going to do without a cow. We've always put a lot of dependence on our milk."

But I might have expected it. Luck has been sheer against me ever since John James died. A man with a house full of gals can't expect to make no headway in the world."

Pardon colored up.

"You didn't expect your girls to mend the bars, did you, father?" asked she, a little bitterly.

"I was calculating to speak to Tim Pardon about getting a new pair of posts put up," sighed the farmer.

"Wouldn't it have been a safer way to put them up yourself, father?"

"I ain't as young as I used to be," said Darwin, evasively. "And the rheumatics is twistin' me powerful these first cool days."

"Then," said Pardon, with a certain touch of dauntless authority in her voice, "you should come into the house and not sit there, getting chilled through, and then find fault with your luck!"

Mr. Darwin slowly rose and shuffled into the bright little kitchen room, where Pardon had spread a neatly braided rug before the fire, and placed a broken-sprung pitcher of yellow golden-rod on the table.

She looked after him with a sigh, half of impatience, half regret.

"I wish John James had lived!" said Mr. Darwin, feebly.

"So do I," assented Pardon. "Ain't supper most ready?" said the farmer, looking discontentedly around.

"It will be in a minute," said Pardon. "I had to split the kindling myself for the kitchen fire, and Fanny has run to Mrs. Merritt's for a little meal to make some hot corn bread."

At the same moment Fanny returned—a slight, overgrown girl of fourteen—breathless with the haste she has made. "Mrs. Merritt is very sorry," said she, "but she hasn't any cornmeal in the house."

"That's enough," said Pardon, glowing scarlet to the roots of her hair. "I don't blame her for getting tired of lending things to us!"

"But," added Fanny, "she sends a pail of Graham flour to make corn. Indeed, indeed, Pardon, she's as kind as she can be!"

"I'm getting as hard and bitter as a sour persimmon," said she. "Yes, I'm very glad of the Graham flour. Father can't make out his supper without something hot for a relish. Perhaps some day we can return Mrs. Merritt's kindness. But oh, Fanny, have you heard? The red cow got out of the pasture this afternoon and is killed on the track!"

Fanny burst into tears.

"Ooh Paddy!" she exclaimed. "Is there no end to our bad luck?"

Pardon stamped her pretty, ill-shod foot impatiently on the floor.

"Luck!" she repeated. "Don't use that dreadful word! I believe father would be a better and happier man if it wasn't in the dictionary at all. There isn't any such thing as luck. It's all bad management, shiftlessness—the habit of putting everything off until the last moment."

And then she cried, too poor little overburdened Pardon.

She was tall and slender, with large, glittering hazel eyes, red-brown hair and one of those delicate complexion where the sun lays its touch in the shape of here and there a cluster of freckles.

Fanny was dark, with Spanish eyes, fringed with long lashes, and hair as black and lustrous as jet. Whether else fate had denied the Darwin girls, it had been generous to them in the matter of personal attributes.

They made their frugal supper of Graham gobs, a very little butter, the weakest brewing of tea, and no milk at all, and then Pardon built up the fire, got her father the last week's newspaper, which good Mrs. Merritt had sent over with the Graham flour, and then sat down in the back kitchen with Fanny to slice up a few peaches for drying.

For we have got to look after things very close this winter," she said. "Father seems to have no energy at all since John James died. I am afraid it will end in the farm being sold to clear off the mortgage."

Fanny opened her big, black eyes.

"But we must live somewhere, Pardon," said she.

"You and I can go out to service," said Pardon. "As for father, there's the poor-house."

Fanny uttered a wail of despair.

"No, no, dear; don't look so distressed,"

SPEED OF A TRAIN.

How It Can Be Easily Calculated by a Passenger.

The Household says: Inquiry is frequently made as to how the speed of a train may be estimated. The traveler is especially curious about the speed his train is making, and we suggest three methods by which the speed may be guessed with remarkable accuracy, as follows:

Watch for the passage of the train by the large white mile posts with black figures upon them, and divide 3,600 by the time in seconds between posts; the result is the speed in miles per hour.

Listen attentively until the car distinguishes the click, click, click of the wheel as it passes a rail joint. The number of clicks upon one side of the car in twenty seconds is the speed in miles per hour, where the rails are thirty feet in length, and this is the case generally.

Count the number of telegraph poles passed in two minutes; if there are four or five wires to a pole; and in two minutes and twenty seconds if there are one or two wires to a pole; the number of poles passed is the number of miles per hour at which the train is traveling.

San Francisco Meat Market.

All fears of a beef famine have vanished. Mutton is scarce and a little firmer in price. Hogs are plentiful, giving rather weak tone to quotations. Following are the rates for whole carcasses from slaughterers to dealers:

BEEF—First quality, 66¢/cwt; second quality, 64¢/cwt; third quality, 62¢/cwt. LAMB—Quotable at 56¢/cwt. PORK—Live hogs, on foot, grain fed, medium, 45¢/cwt; heavy, 44¢/cwt; soft, 43¢/cwt; dressed hogs, 65¢/cwt. B. B.
